OBITUARY

Christian Haren, actor, Marlboro Man

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Christian Haren, who appeared in print ads as the Marlboro Man and later educated young people about AIDS, died Feb. 27.

Haren, diagnosed with AIDS in 1985. He was 61.

After leaving the Army in 1954, Haren received a studio contract with MGM Studios.

He appeared in several films, including "In Harm's Way" with John Wayne.

He also worked on Broadway in the Tony Richardson production of Bertolt Brecht's "The Resistible Rise of Arturo Ui."

In the early '60s, Haren appeared in print ads as a model for Marlboro cigarettes and Budweiser beer. He later owned several businesses, including a Guerneville chocolate store and the CC Construction Co., a famous gay bar in Palm Springs.

Since he contracted AIDS, Haren educated young people about the disease and its prevention.

Haren is survived by his sister, Connie Robey of Mountain Home, Idaho. ▼
